

Dezernat Zukunft

Institute for Macrofinance

Policy Experts at Dezernat Zukunft

We are no John Maynard Keynes, but we do take the values dignity, prosperity and democracy seriously. Our current economic system does not. Come help us change that.

We are looking for those willing to think big, dig deep and chew on the nitty gritty details of economic policy proposals, until they are sufficiently thought through to withstand the scrutiny of experts, while still delivering meaningful change. Our role is to support you in going as far as possible.

Priority areas for recruiting are: European fiscal and monetary policy, labour markets, energy and industrial policy, pension and social security systems all with a focus on Europe and Germany.

Terms and conditions: No specific background but significant relevant work experience, particularly in relevant public sector institutions, or academic training required, pay on par with German federal government pay scales. Our office is in Berlin, remote work may be possible on a case by case basis. No German language skills required. Applicants from official institutions looking to do a sabbatical are very welcome.

The organisation: Dezernat Zukunft - Institute for Macrofinance is a German macrofinance think tank and registered charity founded in 2018. We are headquartered in Berlin and co-led by the political economist Max Krahé, who wrote his dissertation on the relationship of democracy and capitalism and Philippa Sigl-Glöckner, a former Ministry of Finance official and World Banker. Over the past year, our focus has been on fiscal policy, see for instance our paper on a new fiscal policy for Germany and a reform proposal for the preventive arm of the Stability and Growth Pact.

Application: Submit a CV and application letter/email answering the following questions:

1. which area would you like to work on
2. what's an idea that you would like to pursue
3. why do you have the necessary expertise to tackle this topic to info@dezernatzukunft.org. We recruit on a rolling basis, so get your letter in asap.

We are very much looking forward to hearing from you!
